

WINE GLASS

This design appears in the sketches drawn by John Greene between 1667-1672. He was a member of the Glass Sellers Company, King's Arms Glass Shop in London. His sketches include some four hundred designs that were imported from Venice and made by Murano Glassmaker Allesio Morelli. This style glass was used for wine, and was one of several so-called John Greene glasses found at Jamestown.

WINE GLASS

This design appears in the sketches drawn by John Greene between 1667-1672. He was a member of the Glass Sellers Company, King's Arms Glass Shop in London. His sketches include some four hundred designs that were imported from Venice and made by Murano Glassmaker Allesio Morelli. This style glass was used for wine, and was one of several so-called John Greene glasses found at Jamestown.

WINE GLASS

This design appears in the sketches drawn by John Greene between 1667-1672. He was a member of the Glass Sellers Company, King's Arms Glass Shop in London. His sketches include some four hundred designs that were imported from Venice and made by Murano Glassmaker Allesio Morelli. This style glass was used for wine, and was one of several so-called John Greene glasses found at Jamestown.

WINE GLASS

This design appears in the sketches drawn by John Greene between 1667-1672. He was a member of the Glass Sellers Company, King's Arms Glass Shop in London. His sketches include some four hundred designs that were imported from Venice and made by Murano Glassmaker Allesio Morelli. This style glass was used for wine, and was one of several so-called John Greene glasses found at Jamestown.

WINE GLASS

This design appears in the sketches drawn by John Greene between 1667-1672. He was a member of the Glass Sellers Company, King's Arms Glass Shop in London. His sketches include some four hundred designs that were imported from Venice and made by Murano Glassmaker Allesio Morelli. This style glass was used for wine, and was one of several so-called John Greene glasses found at Jamestown.

WINE GLASS

This design appears in the sketches drawn by John Greene between 1667-1672. He was a member of the Glass Sellers Company, King's Arms Glass Shop in London. His sketches include some four hundred designs that were imported from Venice and made by Murano Glassmaker Allesio Morelli. This style glass was used for wine, and was one of several so-called John Greene glasses found at Jamestown.

WINE GLASS

This design appears in the sketches drawn by John Greene between 1667-1672. He was a member of the Glass Sellers Company, King's Arms Glass Shop in London. His sketches include some four hundred designs that were imported from Venice and made by Murano Glassmaker Allesio Morelli. This style glass was used for wine, and was one of several so-called John Greene glasses found at Jamestown.

WINE GLASS

This design appears in the sketches drawn by John Greene between 1667-1672. He was a member of the Glass Sellers Company, King's Arms Glass Shop in London. His sketches include some four hundred designs that were imported from Venice and made by Murano Glassmaker Allesio Morelli. This style glass was used for wine, and was one of several so-called John Greene glasses found at Jamestown.

WINE GLASS

This design appears in the sketches drawn by John Greene between 1667-1672. He was a member of the Glass Sellers Company, King's Arms Glass Shop in London. His sketches include some four hundred designs that were imported from Venice and made by Murano Glassmaker Allesio Morelli. This style glass was used for wine, and was one of several so-called John Greene glasses found at Jamestown.